PA NEW OBSERVES

Pa New observed another sign of spring this morning. A man was carrying big cartons, filled with baby chicks out of the post office.

With many more children playing out in the street, roller skating, etc., the governor's committee on safety urges motorists to be more careful in driving about the streets of the city. A little precaution may save the life of some little one and New Castle motorists are urged to keep this in mind.

The week of Monday, April 17, has been designated by the state departments of Health, Forests and Waters, and the Bureau of Fire Protection, as Clean-up Week. Many New Castle folks are not waiting that long, however, but are doing this work in advance of the appointed time.

Lawn rolling, that great outdoor sport for he-men who pride themselves in attractive lawns, has commenced. Wet weather of the past few weeks make the rolling more effective.

Local streams have shown a drop during the past few days. It is very noticeable in the Neshannock creek near the East Washington street bridge. If the streams continue to fall trout fishing may be good by the time trout season arrives, April 15.

BELIEVE WRECKED AKRON SWALLOWED BY ATLANTIC

(International News Service)
WASHINGTON, April 5.—Theory that the last vestige of the wrecked Akron has been swallowed by the wild Atlantic was strengthened today when the coastguard destroyer Hunt reported that the wreckage of the navy blimp J-3 sank as salvage attempts were being made off Beach Haven, N. J.

Following the Hunt's report of the sinking of the J-3, the Navy Department reported it gave little credence to a report received in New York from the George Washington in which it reported sighting the wreckage of the Akron.

From the position given by the George Washington and that given by the Hunt in reporting the disappearance of the J-3, navy officials said the George Washington had mistaken the wreckage of the smaller dirigible for the Akron.

Local Regulations To Prevail Only Until State Law Is Effective

Friday, April 7, marks a new "return." To the return from Moscow, the return of the Prodigal Son, and election returns, you can add the return of beer. Legal lager so to speak. By act of congress the foaming schurper comes back with all its suds appeal.

And here in Pennsylvania the general assembly is still singing that old refrain "There ought to be a law." There isn't as yet, any law restricting the sale of 3.2 beer either as to time, place or person. Without violating any state or federal law as yet, the legalized, 3.2 non-intoxicating (?) beverage can be (Continued On Page Two)

Final Report On Y Campaign Given Tuesday

Y. W. C. A. Membership Drive Ends With Close To 700 Supporters

ALFRED CHILTON IS SPEAKER AT LUNCHEON

Although the goal set by the Y. W. C. A. membership campaign workers was not quite reached, there was an aura of victory present in the Green room Tuesday afternoon, where a half hundred campaign majors and their captains gathered for the final luncheon.

It was a victory from several angles. The New Castle Y. W. C. A. has a larger membership now than ever in its history with the exception of the tag day memberships received at the time of its organization. There is nearly a 30 percent increase in membership this year as compared with that of last year. The campaign showed the splendid spirit of cooperation which prevails among the members.

Near 700 Members
New members added during the campaign totaled 493. Added to the 170 women who joined the association before the opening of the drive, swells the total to 663. This is fully 150 better than last year.

Reports of the majors for their divisions were as follows:
"Y" division, Mrs. E. W. Guy, major—94. Mrs. John E. Elliott was high among the captains with 37 new members to her credit.

PARIS, April 5.—Leaving a warning letter anyone enter carrying a lighted cigarette or matches, Charles Gatchell, 45-year-old American artist and husband of Fannie Kilbourne, noted novelist, committed suicide by gas in a rented studio in the Montparnasse quarter of Paris today.

His body was found on the kitchen floor of a studio at 11 Rue Schoelcher, according to police, who said gas was escaping from the stove.

Before ending his life Gatchell penned a note to the Concierge, which was mailed last night and received early this morning. It was immediately handed to police, who revealed its contents as follows:

"I am committing suicide in the studio of Mile. Kretzinger. Be careful, don't enter with a lighted cigarette or matches. Gas. A. M. Minifree, 39 Rue Dabetele, will pay for my telephone calls and my laundry, which will be delivered Monday as usual. Call the police at nine."

His mother was a sister of the late John Dwyer, who was a jeweler for many years on East Washington street, and of William Dwyer, Ellwood avenue. There are also a number of cousins in the city.

Gov. Pinchot Has Warned Legislators That Veto Be Put On Bill

By WILLIAM J. KELLY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Apr. 5.—Determined to force Gov. Pinchot's hand on beer control, the senate considered on second reading today the Sowers-Conner regulatory bill, revamped in an attempt to meet the objections of all.

As amended, the bill represents the ideas of Republicans and Democrats but still falls short of being in accord with the proposals of the administration. Because of this, it is believed to face certain veto by Governor Pinchot.

Despite this threat, Republicans and Democrats joined in their attempt to place a control bill on the chief executive's desk before April 7. This is mechanically possible.

Pinchot adamant.

Passage of the bill today on second reading makes it eligible for adoption in the upper branch at Thursday's session. It then could be (Continued On Page Two)

Member Of Akron Crew Here Monday; Escaped Disaster

One man who was a guest at The Castleton on Monday is probably thanking his Guardian Angel that his furlough from the "Akron" did not expire until it did. Wilmer Conover of Akron, O., a member of the crew of the ill-fated dirigible, was saved from the fate of his mates because his furlough did not expire a week ago.

Mr. Conover stopped in The Castleton on Monday and in conversation with Thomas Boyle, manager of the hotel, said that he was a member of the "Akron" crew and was going back to Lakehurst after a furlough spent in Akron, O., his home town.

He described the "Akron" to Mr. Boyle and felt that he was fortunate to be in the service in that spot he was. At the time Mr. Conover and Mr. Boyle were talking, the "Akron" was about ready to leave Lakehurst for the training flight to New England, a flight which was completed when it crashed nose down into the Atlantic ocean.

Asbestos Pants For Woodin Sent By Denver Man

Ogden Mills Calls Secretary's Job "Hot Seat", Needs Asbestos Pants

(International News Service)
DENVER, April 5.—Secretary of the Treasury Woodin will have a pair of asbestos breeches to protect him in what his predecessor, Ogden Mills, described as a "hot seat."

Upon his retirement, Mills warned Woodin that he was taking over one of the "hottest seats" in Washington and suggested that the new secretary secure a pair of asbestos breeches.

After his first few days in office, during the bank holiday, Woodin agreed publicly that Mills was right. Today G. M. Fleichner of Denver wrote Woodin that he was taking the liberty of forwarding a pair of asbestos breeches to the secretary.

"I have learned," Fleichner wrote, "that the treasury seat you occupy is so hot you are badly in need of a pair of asbestos breeches. I am taking the liberty of supplying the required protection. I hope they are a perfect fit."

Plan To Probe Most Costly Disaster In History Of Aviation

International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, April 5.—Search of the Atlantic for the Akron's dead was renewed by ships and airplanes today as official Washington moved toward an investigation of the most costly disaster in the history of aviation. Hope of finding any one alive was abandoned and, in all probability, the death list will stand at 73.

From Barnegat south to the Virginia Capes the navy and the coast guard doggedly searched the waters—apparently to no avail. Radio messages received at the Brooklyn navy yard this morning indicated no additional bodies had been found.

Three United States destroyers—the Cortland, Sagamore and Norfolk—and at least a dozen airplanes covered a wide radius. The hunt was as extensive and thorough as that started by the wireless flash of the Akron's crash off Barnegat in a thunderstorm early yesterday.

Today, however, the sea was fairly calm and the fog which prevented the rescue of many by the German tanker Phoebe had lifted.

The three survivors of the Akron's crash—Lieutenant Commander H. V. Wiley, Boatswain's Mate Richard E. (Continued On Page Six)

HOLLYWOOD, April 5.—Tied with window sash cord and with a wad of paper stuffed in her mouth, Dr. Grace Cunningham, 48, North Hollywood physician, was found early today, the victim of a mysterious assailant, she reported to police.

A week ago Dr. Cunningham was found bound and gagged after having been kidnapped and robbed of $725 by the same persons apparently who burned her home, according to her report to officers. She was unconscious from ether when found.

Dr. Cunningham at a police hospital today was unable to explain the mysterious attacks.

LOCAL GIRL SCOUTS HEAR NATIONAL LEADER

Scout Leaders Enjoy Banquet

Every Branch Of Scouting Represented At Epworth M. E. Church

National Worker Is Honored; Martha Bigley Presiding Chairman

MISS JULIA WILLIAMSON

Sixty-five Girl Scout executives and guests had dinner together in the banquet hall of the Epworth M. E. church last night in honor of Miss Julia Williamson, from the national Girl Scout staff. Miss Williamson is in New Castle this week for the purpose of training women to become leaders of "Brownie-packs," a junior Girl Scout organization for girls of 7 to 10 years of age.

Probably not since the regional convention was conducted here, has such a representative group of New Castle's splendid Girl Scout organization been assembled.

In addition to the council members, captains, lieutenants, troop committee members, mothers and special guests, there was a delegation of eight women from Sharon present. They were: Jane Kunkle, Mary Stockton, Mrs. Walter Dann, Frances Tamplin, Jean Wilson, Josephine Roberts, Mrs. Lewis Wiesen, and Mrs. Barron Leach.

Dinner was served at six o'clock, following prayer by Dr. J. A. Galbraith, pastor of the church in which the event took place. A troop of twenty young ladies in immaculate green uniforms, comprising the troop led by Miss Leona Sankey and Mrs. George Ferver, served a splendid menu which they had prepared by themselves. The food and the competent and well planned way it was served, was in itself a compliment to the Girl Scout movement.

Miss Martha Bigley, New Castle Girl Scout Commissioner, was chairman of the evening. She introduced to the assembly Miss Julia Williamson, the guest of honor, and Dr. Galbraith. Examining committee members, captains, lieutenants, council members, guests, were all given welcome.

Mrs. Herbert Christman was introduced, as was Miss Janet Kissinger, representative of The News. After several camp songs led by Miss Regina Popp and Mrs. George Westlake, and songs by the Girl Scouts led by Miss Sankey, the group retired to an adjoining room to hear Miss Williamson.

Miss Williamson, who is "Field Owl" of the Girl Scouts, joined the organization in 1922 as local director in Philadelphia. Before that she had been in charge of club work in the Philadelphia public library, where she also gave courses in story-telling to librarians. She visited Brownie packs abroad several years ago and at that time gave courses in leadership in Dublin. In 1930 she returned to Europe and visited in England, France and Belgium. In August 1932 she was delegate to a convention in Poland.

Her many and varied experiences in the work made last night's appearance not only authoritative but intensely interesting. She told a number of stories suitable for Girl Scouts and Brownies of different ages, followed by a course in Brownie leadership.

This course was along the lines of that conducted yesterday afternoon for a group of thirty interested leaders, and will be continued this afternoon and evening, as well as on Thursday. New Castle already has one thriving Brownie pack and Miss Williamson hopes that more will be started at the close of the training.

Miss Frances McClaren and Mrs. Joseph Treser, made arrangements for Miss Williamson to address the girls of New Castle senior high school. The appearance was made at 10:30 this morning in the high school auditorium.

At the close of last night's gathering the New Castle Girl Scout Council met for a short business meeting.

LAWRENCE CO. IN TENTH DISTRICT

HARRISBURG, Apr. 5.—Under the provisions of the Sowers-Connors Beer Control bill, commissions would be set up in the various districts of the state.

Lawrence county would come under District 10 in event the bill is passed and signed by Governor Pinchot. The other counties aligned with Lawrence county would be Erie, Crawford, Mercer, Butler, Armstrong, Indiana, Jefferson, Clarion, Venango, Forest, Warren. This is incidentally the largest district in the state. Philadelphia is listed as District One and Allegheny as second district.

to the return of the saloon or place beer regulation in politics. Features of the Sowers-Connors bill, he claims, make such things possible.

The bill as amended by the senate provides that the state treasurer will issue licenses to all manufacturers at a $1,000 fee. Except for Philadelphia, wholesale and retail licenses would be issued by district commissions. In Philadelphia, this work would be performed by the county judges.

Would Have Commissions. Nine district commissions of three members each would be set up throughout the state. A board, consisting of the governor, lieutenant governor, auditor general, state treasurer, and speaker of the house would appoint members of the commissions. Two would be Republicans and the third a Democrat. Chosen from three names submitted to the board by the Democratic state chairman.

The measure stipulates that all license fees will go to the municipalities while the beverage tax would be divided evenly between the state and the counties. Wholesalers and retailers in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Scranton would pay $250 for a license while the fees for other municipalities would be levied in accordance with population. A tax of a dollar per barrel would be levied on beer.

MAYOR DECLARES LOCAL REGULATIONS TO BE ENFORCED

sold in Pennsylvania to a six year old youngster on the public square at high noon on Easter Day.

Not In New Castle. Not at all. There may be no state laws against the unrestricted cascading of the amber suds over the Keystone state, but here in New Castle there is going to be some reasonable restriction. Not through the application of any state law but through the application of a few city ordinances and a little applied common sense.

Mayor Charles B. Wayne believes that law is merely applied common sense and if the general assembly can't pull itself together sufficiently to enact a law that will control beer, he will. Not only will he, but the rules he has set down will be enforced.

No sale on Sunday. No sale to minors. No sale by any persons convicted of bootlegging. No sale within 300 feet of a church or school, except in the business district. All sellers must register or be arrested for conducting a disorderly house.

"Congress has said this beverage is non-intoxicating," said the mayor, "and perhaps it won't intoxicate some people, but it can't be sold indiscriminately in New Castle."

"Nor should the people who are registering get the idea that their act of registering in this office gives them a license that will last after the state law is passed and signed."

"The local regulations will be in effect only until the minute the state law goes into effect. After that we will have nothing to do with it except to enforce the state ordinances covering law and order in the community."

Outsiders Must Register. "I understand that there are a number of salesmen in the city soliciting orders for various brands of beer, and that these salesmen think they don't have to register. They do, and in this respect we have a very binding ordinance concerning selling in the city without a license."

"They are salesmen of a commodity just as though they were selling shirts or shoes, or canned beans. In order to make sales they have promised customers that they will deliver Milwaukee beer here in New Castle on Friday, from a warehouse in Cleveland."

"It just can't be done. In every brewery there is a government inspector whose duty it is to see that no beer is moved out of the brewery before 12:01 a. m. Friday, April 7. Hence it would be impossible to get Milwaukee beer into New Castle on Friday, unless these salesmen are peddling bootleg beer, and they can be prosecuted for that."

"Another thing. When a citizen registers to sell beer, he is not getting permission to sell bootleg beer, or peddle hard liquor. If our officers find any sale of hard liquor in homes or stores registered to sell the new brew, they will be prosecuted as vigorously as though the beer bill were never passed. Further, bootleg beer can be distinguished from legal beer by the caps on the bottles, or by the bottle markings."

Plenty of Applications. "There are plenty of applications," said the mayor. "Some of them seem to think I will finance their project. Some persons coming in here to register for beer sales haven't enough money to buy a case for themselves. When they find that beer is going to be sold cash on the counter, they decide they don't want to sell."

"This should be clearly understood," said the mayor. "Our regulations here in New Castle are only put in effect to preserve peace and good order. We are not trying to usurp the duties of the state government, nor are we endeavoring to establish a system of licensing. When the state law goes in our rules go out, but as long as there isn't any state law, the local rules will apply."

phase of the accident as a guide to future naval policy. The subcommittee will meet Friday to prepare for the opening of hearings.

Lt. Comdr. H. V. Wiley and the other survivors of the Akron tragedy will be called before the committee to tell their stories of the ship's battle with the elements off the New Jersey coast.

Naval Inquiry Court. Lakehurst, N. J., April 5.—Naval experts were discussing among themselves today the cause of the breaking up of a ship which was thought to be stormproof.

Nothing definite will be learned until the customary naval court of inquiry is appointed to investigate the disaster. The usual method of procedure is for the commander of the naval district after conferring with the secretary of the navy to appoint a board consisting of high ranking naval officers. There is also a possibility that civilian technical experts may be included.

If this plan is followed—and Lieut. Commander Jesse Kenworthy in charge of Lakehurst indicated that he thought it would—the appointment would be made by Capt. G. W. Haines, acting commander of the fourth naval district which includes Lakehurst and has Philadelphia for its headquarters.

When Henry L. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, left Lakehurst yesterday, he went to Philadelphia to confer with the ranking officers of the district.

Dr. Mildred Rogers, membership chairman, presided at the luncheon. Each major, with her captains, had a separate table.

Chilton Is Speaker. Alfred W. Chilton, of the Chamber of Commerce, gave his impressions of the campaign. He stated that the campaign was a success because of the fine organization, and that this fact stood above everything, whether the goal was reached or not.

Mrs. A. B. Fankhauser, president of the board of directors, thanked the workers for their untiring efforts and their tangible accomplishment. She was especially appreciative for the way the new members of the association entered into the search for additional supporters. More new members took an active part this year than ever before.

Dr. Rogers asked Miss Margarette White, Y. W. C. A. general secretary, to bring the closing remarks. Miss White spoke of the very great need for all members to feel responsible for the association. She asked the assembled workers to see that all the women who this year became members for the first time, are kept in the annual meeting in May in order to cast their votes for new officers.

Seeks Recess Of State Legislature

Philadelphia Representative Would Have Recess Until May 8

(International News Service) HARRISBURG, April 5.—Rep. C. A. Sowers, Philadelphia, today proposed a recess of the Pennsylvania legislature after next week's sessions until May 8.

He introduced a resolution to that effect in the House, pointing out that committees are swamped with bills which they have thus far been unable to consider. He said the recess would give them time to work on the measure.

Adoption of the resolution, which was laid over for printing, would have the effect of forcing the governor to act, within ten days, on all bills sent to him before the recess because legally the session would not be adjourned sine die.

Bills left on the governor's desk when the legislature adjourns sine die may be acted on within 30 days following adjournment. While the assembly is in session the governor must act on bills within ten days.

MacDONALD WILL VISIT U. S. FOR DEBT DISCUSSION

"In the course of informal exchanges of views between the British and ourselves in regard to the general economic situation and problem of disarmament, the President has felt that a visit to Washington by the prime minister would be helpful."

"The President ever since his first conversation with the British ambassador at Warm Springs has expressed the hope that the prime minister could come over."

The impression obtained was that no formal invitation had been extended from Washington to MacDonald, but rather that Mr. Roosevelt expressed informally a neighborly invitation that he would be glad to see him at any time. The date and conditions were left entirely up to MacDonald's convenience.

There is no present prospect that other heads of governments will come to Washington.

Mr. Roosevelt's favorite hymn doubtless is "Wonder-working Power."

There's nothing more devastating than war, unless you count a securities department.

AWARD $50,000 BRICK CONTRACT TO LOCAL FIRM

Pearson Plant To Produce Material For Large New York Prison

The Pearson Brick company's plant along the Neshannock creek will begin the production within a few days of brick to meet a new $50,000 contract which New York state awarded it Monday as a part of the construction awards for the new Medium Security prison at Woodburn, situated along the west shore of the Hudson river between New York and Albany.

News of the awarding of the contract was learned today. The job will keep the regular plant forces employed for seven months.

The style of brick specified, it was learned, calls for a design of 15th century Italian gothic.

While the new work will provide no employment for new men, the contract, it is said, will keep in operation the Pearson plant for the seven months ahead and provide a total railroad freight revenue amounting to between $15,000 and $20,000.

Shipments will commence as soon as the first carload is completed.

THE AKRON DISASTER

THE New Castle district, along with the rest of the nation, and the world for that matter, was shocked by the tragedy that befell The Akron, yesterday off the Atlantic coast, costing the lives of 73 brave men of the American Navy service.

Supposed to be the finest and best dirigible in the entire world, the Akron apparently was destroyed in the twinkling of an eye, with scarcely the semblance of an explanation for the disaster today, except that it was caught in a storm, and failed to survive.

The few survivors who were picked up seem to have little explanation for the cause of the catastrophe. A rigid inquiry by the Naval department may develop some explanation for the tragic epic of Barnegat Light, but even that will be of scant consolation to a grieving nation.

The history of America's experience with dirigibles is not one that tends toward enthusiasm for this line of craft. Disaster after disaster has overtaken them, with The Akron the costliest in lives and expenditures.

There are many who are dubious as to the ultimate value of such costly experiments. What is the gain at such a cost? It seems to be the conclusion at Washington that building of type of craft such as The Akron will be dispensed with for the immediate future at least, and the fate of The Akron may spell the end of such experiments by this nation.

Practically the only example of a successful dirigible that remains today is the Graf Zeppelin which has travelled many thousands of miles, has gone round the world, and apparently demonstrated its airworthiness in all kinds of weather. But, over against this is the tragic fate that has befallen, American, British, French, and Italian dirigibles.

To the average citizen there is increasingly great doubt that national experimentation with the gigantic dirigible type of craft is justifiable.

INVITING TROUBLE

Although the house foreign affairs committee has approved by a 12-to-6 vote the McReynolds joint resolution giving the president authority to declare arms embargoes in cooperation with other nations, Chairman McReynolds said no attempt would be made to rush the measure through the house.

This may be taken as an indication there is no urgent need for adoption of the resolution. This being the case, the proposal should be thoroughly studied from all possible viewpoints before approval be given it. Giving of such blanket authority to the President would be another radical step in transferring congressional powers to the executive. Were there an emergency which made such action of possible benefit to world peace or to the interests of the United States, it might be desirable. No such emergency exists, however. There is, rather, a danger, or at least, a possibility that serious complications involving this country's interest might arise out of the action.

Some objections reflecting this were voiced by witnesses who appeared before the committee in opposition to the resolution. Professor Edwin M. Borchard, of Yale university, went so far as to say that the mere threat of the resolution presented likelihood of "war with Japan in 30 days." A more restrained but nevertheless impressive view was taken by John Bassett Moore, authority on international law and formerly assistant secretary of state.

"Within the terms of the pending resolution," he said in a letter read into the record, "our government would be asked to set itself up in rash and arrogant judgment upon the acts of other nations and on the merits of their conflicts with a view to give or to permit military aid to one as against another. Before committing ourselves to this presumptuous program based on the question of 'the aggressor,' we should reflect upon the fact that had such a notion heretofore prevailed, we might and in all probability ourselves have been the victim of it."

The possibility of the United States becoming involved in European conflicts is one not to be overlooked. Mr. Moore apparently had this in mind when he predicted that if the resolution were passed, groups, moved by their own interest or swayed by propaganda, "would clamor at the white house and at the department of state for the unneutral application of the ban in favor of those whom they approve."

NEW TREATY-MAKING PLAN

A new method in negotiating treaties is to be introduced by President Roosevelt, if the Washington interpretation given a recent announcement by the state department proves to be correct.

The department revealed that before beginning to negotiate new commercial agreements the president would seek in advance congressional authority and specification.

Just what plan or method will be followed in carrying out this idea, the state department's announcement did not disclose. Instead of negotiating a treaty which may or may not subsequently be ratified by the senate, the President is hopeful that a way may be found by which he can begin negotiations in possession of a specific grant of power which will assure acceptance of the agreement he effects.

Although a sharp departure from the old method, the proposal has advantages which can not be disputed. If a way to carry it out be found, foreign representatives in conducting negotiations with the President will have assurance that any agreement reached will be binding in its effects. The President would be in a more advantageous position also if he knew beforehand just how far he could go and what he could do. The old method has been the source of much complaint in the past from foreign nations because of the uncertainty involved in the negotiations. Advance congressional consent would do away with this, and at the same time, it seems, comply with constitutional requirements.

The total income of the American people—which means the income of the average taxpayer—has declined more than 50 per cent since 1929, so federal jobholders are given a 15 per cent cut in pay, apparently on the theory that the taxpayer ought to be glad he has anything left.

NOT PLEASANT READING.

Most humans go to the theatre to be amused. They read books to be amused if they are not reading books for instruction in their professions or for the purpose of gaining knowledge in history, economics and all such matters.

Stark realism, tragedy and human misery are not agreeable things about which to read or to see portrayed upon the stage or the movie screen.

Few people can understand why Sinclair Lewis merited the Nobel Prize. He has never written a not quite as a writer of fiction who will live like Thackeray, who was himself a satirist, but who produced the wonderful characters of Henry Esmond and Colonel Newcomb, or of Scott, whose romances will live as long as the English language.

Sinclair Lewis belongs to the caste of George Bernard Shaw, who seem to live for the sole purpose of saying unpleasant things.

TRIVIAL MATTERS

Isn't it a fact that most of the heated arguments in your home are based upon inconsequential matters?

Quarrels a-plenty are the result of little differences of opinion that should not cause any anger.

Instead of admitting a mistake or an error the one accused seeks at once to swing the argument in his or her personal favor.

Retaliation and biting remarks prolong the conversation to a serious point.

Perhaps there was no real cause for complaint or for sarcasm, but anger sways good judgment and kindness is forgotten and a quarrel ensues.

Think over the disagreements that have happened in your own home.

Were you justified?

Were you not too quick and sarcastic in your replies?

Were you not unjust in your accusations?

Don't lose control of your emotions in trivial matters.

There are enough big and important problems which come up in every home that require an exchange of opinion and are likely to lead to trouble.

Don't carry a chip on your shoulder.

Farm Bill Seen As Evidence
Of Confidence In President

Uncertainties As To Result, Conceded By Executive, Overshadowed By Need Of Better Conditions In Nation's Agriculture

Further evidence of public confidence in President Roosevelt is found by newspaper editors in willingness to approve the proposals of the new farm relief bill, notwithstanding the uncertainties that are recognized by the executive and the country. Promise that detrimental features that may affect any of the provisions will lead to remedial action by the administration is accepted as a factor in this legislation. Dictatorial power for the secretary of agriculture is viewed as the outgrowth of a national emergency. The measure provides for a tax on goods in process for the benefit of those who reduce acreage.

"It is the duty of responsible, patriotic citizens not to make exaggerated attacks or to ignore whatever features will help to assure the American people of the government's intent to protect their interest," advises the BOSTON TRANSCRIPT, while the INDIANAPOLIS NEWS declares that "the country's capacity to take economic chances probably has been considered by the president, and throughout the discussion he has referred to it as an emergency experiment." Presidential influence is recognized by the NASHVILLE BANNER as giving the legislation "a support and momentum that would otherwise be lacking," while the CINCINNATI TIMES STAR says: "It is a daring experiment in a dangerous situation. Perhaps it is also a reckless experiment. But it is not so reckless as the proposals of some of its bitterest critics." Willingness to "entrust solution to the presidential Moses" is seen by the MERIDIAN STAR.

The SPRINGFIELD (MASS.) UNION, however, argues that "the great body of public opinion is not in favor of any rash experiments, even when it is promised that, in the event of failure, and after the harm has been done, the failure will be admitted."

Approval of action, "in order that we may learn as soon as possible just what the experiment will or will not do," is given by the SIOUX FALLS DAILY ARGUS LEADER while the president's willingness to halt any dangerous development is considered a moving factor by the NEW ORLEANS TIMES-PICAYUNE. The SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE and the TEXARKANA GAZETTE. The BUFFALO EVENING NEWS calls the measure "a great gain over what had been urged in the 72nd congress" and sees the president getting "support which helps both him and the country." The BIRMINGHAM AGE-HERALD concludes: "Even if it is granted that the president has not devised a sure-fire cure, even if we are right in believing that he has not found the key to the riddle of agricultural prosperity, it is only too plain that an aggressive approach to the agricultural prosperity, it is only too plain that the problem is the only way of dealing with the matter." The COLUMBIA (S. C.) STATE CONCEDES "that the argument for the principle has weight and force." The LINCOLN STATE JOURNAL thinks "the $800,000,000 that Secretary Wallace says the plan will cost might be a cheap price for prospective." The OSHKOSH DAILY NORTHWESTERN states that "it is admittedly an experiment but there is much common sense in the idea."

"Now is the time to act," contends the ASBURY PARK EVENING PRESS, while the ROANOKE WORLD-NEWS argues that "the present law pertaining to commodities, making it impossible for the average farmer to make a living from the land, justifies intelligent experimentation." The FORT

National Farm Outlook

Upheavals In Agriculture

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press

Momentous changes are taking place in the status of agriculture. The farm bill which the administration recommends will of itself mark the start of a new epoch. Such important readjustments as the changes in the law governing bankruptcies and mortgage foreclosures pass almost without notice except among the debtors and creditors immediately concerned.

However, all these upheavals will subside in time, and will range themselves in their proper order of importance. We will be able to see more clearly whether it was wise or unwise to take emergency steps to keep distressed farm enterprises going, and to maintain their production of crops.

In the swirl of events the disappearance of the federal farm board also may be overlooked. That somewhat unlucky body passed out of existence through Mr. Roosevelt's executive order consolidating all the farm credit activities of the government. Or it is more accurate to say that it will cease to exist at the end of the 61-day period prescribed by congress.

The marketing act, however, remains intact, except for the cancellation of section 9, the provision for stabilization corporations, in which so many millions of dollars were sunk. What money remains in the famous "revolving fund" will be used, as it should have been all along, only for the support and encouragement of co-operative selling organizations. The stabilization corporations will be wound up at once—an easy matter as far as their small remaining

The lending functions of the farm board will hereafter be only one of several farm credit activities, all operating under a new head to be known as the "Farm Credit Administration." Besides loans to co-operatives, it will manage the seed and feed loans now administered by the department of agriculture, the entire structure of the federal farm banks and intermediate credit banks, and the regional credit corporations promoted by the R. F. C.

There is no inherent reason that I can see why the plan will not work. Essential systems, records and personnel of such extremely important bodies as the federal farm loan board will be taken over bodily. They will not be shattered and scattered as well as before, if not better. The money which can be saved will be welcome to the treasury.

The great commodity co-operatives are to have continued support, and that influential section of agriculture that retains full faith in co-operative selling may set its mind at rest on that score.

It was a Napoleonic scheme, to be sure. And Mr. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., who takes the general direction as governor of the farm credit administration, is likely to have busy days and somewhat more than his share of headaches.

Parole Officer Is Heard By Parents

Dunlap Speaks On 'Leisure Time' At West Side; Group Defends Schools

Pleading with the parents to keep the leisure moments of their children occupied and lauding the modern press for its fine treatment of juvenile case reports, Jack M. Dunlap, county parole and probation officer, spoke to the West Side Parent-Teacher association on "The Use of the Leisure Time of Boys and Girls."

"Mischievous larks," the county officer declared, "where idleness exists. We must keep the children's time profitably occupied."

Principal J. G. Leslie of the West Side school followed Mr. Dunlap, speaking on the matter of the state appropriation to the schools.

"Regardless of all the economies effected in the operation of the schools," asserted the principal, "any decrease in the state appropriation must be made up by local taxes on real estate. As real estate now bears a very heavy tax burden and is sorely in need of relief it is imperative that the state appropriation to the schools be not decreased but if possible increased."

A resolution, petitioning local spokesmen in Pennsylvania's General Assembly to do all in their power to prevent a decrease in the state appropriation to the schools, was unanimously adopted.

Entertainment, furnished by a group of West Side children, featured the evening meeting. Their program follows:

Readings—Lena Mae McConnell. Clog dancing—Mary Tyler, William Palmer, Vivian Quarrells, Ernest Huddle, Virginia Brooks and Geraldine Fielding. Gertrude Taylor accompanied them.

Making Plans For City Jobs

May Arrange Sewer To Eliminate Water Nuisance

Harry Hoskins, engineer for the city of New Castle today stated that plans are in progress for improvements in three different places, Croton avenue hillside, Fairview avenue and Cunningham park.

If the city is able to secure a portion of land desired from property owners, a stone wall and barricade will be erected along Croton avenue hill and a sidewalk laid.

Owing to a water nuisance it is probable the city will have to lay a sewer in Dean park across Taylor street to eliminate the nuisance in a Fairview avenue home.

At Cunningham park plots are to be laid off. The lots will be given to persons who wish to grow vegetables.

NO PARK DRINKING FOR STEUBENVILLE

STEUBENVILLE, O., April 5.—The city recreation board today placed a ban on the sale and drinking of beer in municipal parks. Applications for permission to sell beer in two parks during the summer season were rejected. The city also abandoned all plans to tax the distribution of beer here, Solicitor Carl Weinman ruling the city could not charge a fee for permits without conflicting with the state.

P. R. R. Summarizes Business In 1932

Railroad's Annual Report Made Known Today, Lists Road Operations

The annual report of the Pennsylvania Railroad company for 1932, made public at Philadelphia today, reflects the further unsatisfactory conditions of general business which prevailed during the year, but also discloses the results of the extraordinary efforts of the management to cope with the situation.

The railway operating revenues, amounting to $331,339,457, showed a decrease of $116,696,821, or 26 per cent, compared with the previous year. The decrease compared with 1929 was $361,745,273, or 52 per cent. The steps taken in every direction to achieve the greatest possible efficiency and economy in operations is reflected in a reduction of $110,854,328 in operating expenses, or 31.4 per cent, compared with the previous year, and a decrease of $258,413,750, or 51.6 per cent compared with 1929. The operating ratio, which is the percentage of operating revenues required to pay operating expenses, was reduced from 78.7 per cent in 1931 to 73 per cent in 1932.

Met 1932 Dividend.

After meeting all obligations there remained a net income for the year of $13,573,536, which was equivalent to $1.03 per share on the capital stock. Out of this net income, the 1932 consecutive dividend to Pennsylvania railroad stockholders was paid on March 15, of the present year, at the rate of 1 per cent on the par value of the stock. The Pennsylvania railroad has paid its stockholders a cash return upon their investment in every year since 1847.

"The results to the company," says General W. W. Atterbury, president in referring to the record of 1932, "while not satisfactory, continue to compare favorably with those attained by railroads generally."

Erie & Ashtabula division officials here said that during 1932 a total of $6,571,493 in revenue was produced on E. & A. division lines.

"The firm name was Lord and Hunter, and we published the 'Goldfield Daily Bulletin.' Lord was the editor and myself the business and advertising manager. It was printed on a mimeograph and was circulated by subscription."

"We had an arrangement with the San Francisco Morning Chronicle to wire us so many words every morning on the leading happenings of the world. It came in skeleton form and Lord would elaborate on this and pad it out."

"We had the closing quotations of all the leading Nevada mining stocks listed on the San Francisco exchange. This was one of our big features as most everyone in Goldfield had mining shares."

"When one of our 'Daily Bulletins' was posted up in Tex Rickard's Great Northern saloon and gambling hall, there would be a crowd gathered around 25 and 50 deep."

"At the height of the boom, Lord received a wire from one of the leading eastern papers to return to Washington and resume his former position as a staff correspondent. Lord was very reluctant to leave Goldfield as he had become fascinated with mining camp life, but the offer was so flattering he decided to accept it. I lost a fine partner and a warm and staunch friend. I look for him to receive some high appointment under President Roosevelt."

TWO LIVES LOST

Many Witnesses To Disaster
That Overtook Blimp In Akron Search

(International News Service)
BEACH HAVEN, N. J., April 5.—Efforts to salvage the rescue blimp J-3 this morning met with failure when after the coast guard destroyed Hunt had located the wreckage and was preparing to tow it to shore, the J-3 slipped back into its watery grave.

The Hunt was unable to again locate the wreckage and at 7:19 gave up the attempt. On the log of the Lakehurst naval station an entry was put opposite the name of the J-3 it said:

"Lost at sea."

Beach Haven, N. J., April 5.—Many witnesses will be available when official investigation is held into the crash of the navy non-rigid blimp J-3 which cost two lives.

The J-3 plunged into the ocean near here while making a dangerous but fruitless search at sea for survivors of the wrecked dirigible Akron. Two of J-3's men were lost, five rescued.

Fully 500 persons on the sands at Beach Haven saw the blimp flash flame and then drop into the surf. The dozens of stories of what occurred, or seemed to occur, in the second airship collapse of the black day of the navy will be available to investigators.

Policemen Heroes
Two New York policemen, Otto A. Kafka and acting sergeant John W. Forsythe, were hailed today as heroes of the blimp accident. They arrived on the scene in a police plane and rescued five of the crew.

The two who lost their lives were Lieut. Commander David E. Cummings, who formerly lived at Prescott, Ark., and Pasquale Bettio, aviation machinist mate, first class, of Lakehurst, N. J.

Those rescued: Lieutenant John H. Thornton, who commanded the J-3. His home is in Greensboro, N. C.; Lieut. William A. Cockell, of Oswego, N. Y.

Chief Radioman H. E. Manley, Brattleboro, Vt.
Aviation Machinist Mate A. S. Sprague, Henderson, N. Y.
Aviation Machinist Mate W. H. Myers, Bridgeport, Conn.

The five men were pulled from the waves by the two policemen who landed beside the wreck in a tiny plane owned by the New York police.

Tried To Land
Lieut. Cockell told how the blimp had been fighting a 45-mile wind and they decided to land at Beach Haven.

"We dropped ground lines and about 50 people grabbed hold," he related. "A cross gust of wind and a sudden lifting tendency of the ship tore the landing ropes away from the helpers on the ground."

"We drifted toward the sea. One of the drag ropes caught over a high tension wire and there was a blinding flash. But that flash caused no further damage."

"We were, however, drifting out over the sea. The J-3 was equipped with a zipper rip in the helium bag, to permit quick landings."

"We pulled the rip and, as the ship lurched over, the wind carried us more rapidly to sea. We were taken out perhaps half a mile. Then those of us who were free to jump leaped."

"The bag crumbled, fell into the water and then began to drift rapidly away."

FIND NO TRACE OF DIRIGIBLE OR CREW MEMBERS

Deal and Moody F. Erwin, aviation machinist's mate—meanwhile were recovering from the effects of their harrowing experience.

Go To Probe.
Shortly before noon Lieut. Commander Wiley who, with Deal and Erwin had spent the night at the naval base hospital in Brooklyn, left by automobile for the Floyd Bennett field where they were to get into a plane and be flown to Washington.

To the Akron's death toll of 73 must be added the two lives lost in the crash of the non-rigid navy blimp, the J-3, which was forced into the sea off Beach Haven while searching for the Akron. Five of the crew of the J-3 were rescued. The blimp itself was a total loss, the bag drifting out to sea.

Naval authorities at Lakehurst, N. J., the Akron's home port, were ready to concede today that none of the 73 men still unaccounted for can possibly be alive.

While the searchers had given up hope of finding anyone alive they felt they might find bits of wreckage that will supplement the tale of the three survivors.

Heroism Aboard.
But the story of the quiet heroism of those aboard during the Akron's sudden drop to oblivion, will cause the widows and children of the missing to hold their heads high in the years to come.

Lieut. Commander Herbert Victor Wiley, only surviving officer of the doomed airship, told how each member of the crew took his place quietly when he gave the ominous command to "stand by for crash."

The largest airship afloat in the world had become hogtied in the vortex of a sudden thunder and lightning storm. Although the lightning had played around the ship like a blast, fortune had it not scorched nor harmed her. Commander Wiley believed.

From midnight onward the airship battled to get out of the grip of the storm. Ballast was heaved, engines were functioning at full speed ahead, the elevators were used skillfully.

But the strain and stress from the cross-currents, the buffeting from the raging gales, were too much for her.

Trapped in the very center of the storm, the rudder control wires broke.

Took Sharp Lurch.
"The ship took a sharp lurch," said Commander Wiley, second in command, who was in the forward control car with the other commanding officers. The time was about 12:30 p. m.

"I tried to steer with the lower rudder. However, within less than a minute afterward I heard a popping noise and the lower rudder control rope was also broken."

"The elevator man repeated several times that the ship was falling. I heard him say '600 feet. By this time the bow of the ship was inclined up about 20 degrees. The ship was falling quite rapidly."

"The fog was so thick that nothing could be seen. I asked the altitude. The answer was 300 feet."

"I gave the order—stand by for crash."

Falling through space—what horror dreams are made of.

These men knew airships. They knew what was going to happen. The crew knew that within a minute—Wiley said the ship hit the water almost immediately afterwards—there would be but a tangled mass of duralumin, spouting oil and gas—line from engines to bait the lightning, within the smothered envelope of the rubberized fabric.

"Stand by for crash."

Was it every man for himself? The navy will tell you. Commander Wiley, who was there, will tell you the answer.

"All orders were given and carried out efficiently," he recorded. "There was no conversation after I said: 'Stand by for crash.'"

Pronouncement of Death.
"The signal was rung up on the engine cars."

These cars are the signal stations dotted throughout the mammoth airship, almost three city blocks in length.

Everywhere, the order—equivalent of almost certain death—was received quietly, every man struck to his emergency station and said nothing.

Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, who was a passenger during the fatal training cruise because he loved to fly, was in the control car with Commander Wiley and Commander F. T. McCord, skipper of the airship, during the battle with the storm.

The admiral quietly discussed the severity of the storm with Wiley. "He compared it with one which we had encountered when he was on board a year ago January in Alabama," said Commander Wiley.

The surviving officer said that when the airship hit the water he was washed out one of the windows. He didn't know what happened to the other officers.

He paid tribute to the rescue work of Captain Karl Daildorf of the German tanker Phoebe, who picked him and three enlisted men from the waters.

One of them, Robert W. Copeland, chief radio operator, was unconscious when rescued and died shortly afterwards.

The other three survivors, under treatment in the Brooklyn yard naval hospital, today were virtually recovered from their exposure to the icy waters and harrowing experience.

Only a few scattered fragments of the Akron had been found up until daylight today.

However, the liner George Washington sent a radio message to the navy department reporting that it had sighted what appeared to be the outer cover of an airship with wreckage surrounding it at a point many miles southeast of the scene of the tragedy.

The cruiser Portland was ordered to visit the scene.

High winds and a storm front extending from Virginia to Massachusetts during the night were indicated by weather bureau charts in the path of the Akron during its training cruise up the New England coast.

Akron, giant dirigible which crashed off the coast of New Jersey, on the arrival of the Tucker at New York. The men were picked up by the Danish tanker Phoebe and transferred to the Tucker at sea. To the left on stretcher in foreground is Boatswain's Mate Richard C. Deal, severely injured; walking in back of him is Seaman Moody E. Erwin, and in rear, with white hair and back turned to camera, is Lieutenant Commander H. C. Wiley. In the picture on the right the body of Chief Radioman Robert W. Copeland, who died of his injuries while en route to New York, is shown being brought off.

Sale Of Farm Is Involved In Suit

W. D. McBride, Realty Broker,
Seeking To Recover $360 Commission

W. D. McBride, a real estate broker of Butler, is plaintiff in a suit on trial at court before Judge R. L. Hildebrand, in which he is seeking to recover $360 commission from John and Clara Bowers for the sale of a 183 acre farm in Perry township, Lawrence county.

McBride claims that on March 1, 1932 Bowers gave him his farm to sell at a net price of $6,800. Any amount over that sum was to go to McBride as his commission.

Plaintiff says that he secured Harry and Mary Miller as purchasers for the farm at a price of $7,200. Deed was delivered in May, 1932. A few days before the consummation of the deal, McBride says that it was agreed between him and Bowers that he was to receive $360 as his commission instead of $400, which he would have received under the original agreement. None of this money, McBride claims, has ever been paid.

Bowers objects to paying the commission, alleging that McBride did not make the deal. According to Bowers he gave McBride permission to sell the farm to John J. Petrus for $7,500, which price was later reduced to $6,800, but that the deal did not go through. Bowers claims that McBride's right to sell the farm was then revoked.

Later Miller bought the farm. McBride claims to have told Miller about it, but did not go to Miller to see it as Miller insisted on going by himself. The case is still on trial.

Two Enlisted Men Saved From Akron Leaped Into Ocean

By LEIGH MATTESON
International News Service Correspondent

NEW YORK, April 5.—The only two enlisted men survivors of the sea crash of the navy dirigible Akron jumped partially clear of the crumpling ship just before it hit the water, it was disclosed today.

To this act they attributed their escape, according to Paul H. Harris, second-class pharmacist's mate of the coast guard destroyer Tucker, which yesterday landed the three surviving members of the Akron's crew at the Brooklyn navy yard.

The lone commissioned officer survivor, Lieutenant Commander Herbert V. Wiley, gave his personal escape story to the press late yesterday, but the enlisted men survivors, Second-class Machinist's Mate Moody E. Irwin and Boatswain's Mate Richard E. Deal, were still unable to see visitors today at the Navy Yard hospital.

Harris said today that the German rescue tanker Phoebe, at dawn in the Tucker's lifeboat to give first aid to the survivors. After vainly assisting in the attempts to resuscitate Chief Radio Electrician Robert W. Copeland, who had been taken aboard the Phoebe alive, only to die in a few hours, Harris treated Irwin and Deal.

Harris said today that the German officers gave the two enlisted men the medicine they most needed. "That was a lot of schnapps," he said. "There was nothing in the kit I brought over from our rum casker that did those two men nearly so much good."

Following the administration of this medicine Irwin and Deal told Harris their escape stories.

"They both said they jumped when they felt the ship falling with great rapidity," he said. "They did not seem to know how they managed to get out of the compartments, but both said they knew they were low over water and did not feel like 'getting caught in a trap.'"

"Irwin and Deal were in different compartments, assigned to different duties. Neither knew the other had jumped. Irwin said he guessed he jumped later than Deal because he came up under something and had to fight blindly to reach the surface.

"Deal said he seemed to have landed in the sea behind the dirigible, as nothing was overhead when he came to the surface of the water. Deal was badly bruised about the right hip. I believe that was where he struck from a considerable height above the water.

"Lieutenant Commander Wiley, who was rescued first, swam toward the Phoebe. He was not in the water more than 20 or 30 minutes. Deal and Irwin, however, weak and shocked, were clinging to a gasolin or water tank that had torn loose from the airship.

"Irwin said he had found the tank first and that about 15 minutes later Deal bobbed up and grabbed hold on its slippery surface.

"The two enlisted men said they were so weak they could not yell loud enough for their voices to carry to the Phoebe. It was about two hours before the crew of a lifeboat from the Phoebe came within range of their voices and plucked them to safety."

Harris said he believed Copeland had been dead about an hour before he arrived aboard the Phoebe. "His arms already were getting stiff," he said.

Assessors Will Be Called In Session

Basis On Which Triennial Assessment In County Is To Be Made To Be Discussed

Before the 1933 triennial assessment is made for county purposes, the county commissioners expect to call county assessors together for a conference at the court house to determine the basis upon which the assessment is to be made.

County Commissioner P. O. Elder stated this morning that in all probability the meeting would not be called until some time in June.

In former years it has been the custom of assessors to depend largely on former valuations in making up their new books. A somewhat different situation will confront them this year, owing to the fact that there has been considerable depreciation in property.

It will be a difficult matter for assessors to place an accurate value on property, but it is important that they have some uniform standard of arriving at their conclusions. The law is said to contemplate a fair sale value. With a separate as-

Braving The Wilderness—No. 33. Redskin And Paleface

BY DISTRIBUTING PRESENTS AND PROMISING SMALL ANNUITIES, GOVERNOR HARRISON OF INDIANA TERRITORY FINALLY SUCCEEDED IN PERSUADING THE CHIEFS OF THE MIAMIS TO SELL SEVERAL LARGE TRACTS OF LAND IN THE OHIO VALLEY.

BY 1805 HARRISON HAD ACQUIRED ALL THE SOUTHERN PART OF INDIANA FOR THE WHITES. EACH NEW PURCHASE OF LAND WAS FOLLOWED BY A FRESH RUSH OF PIONEERS. CLOSE CONTACT WITH THE SETTLERS GAVE THE INDIANS FEW OF THE WHITE MAN'S VIRTUES, BUT MOST OF HIS VICES.

THE INDIANS WOULD GIVE ANYTHING OR DO ANYTHING TO OBTAIN LIQUOR, AND THE WHITE MEN WERE QUICK TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS WEAKNESS.

PARSIGHTED INDIAN LEADERS SAW THAT, IF THE SALE OF TRIBAL LANDS AND THE FORCES OF DEMOCRATIZATION CONTINUED UNCHECKED, THE REP MEN WOULD SOON BECOME A HOMELESS AND HOPELESSLY DEGRADED RACE.

But if senate investigations continue, where will the success magazines find examples?

Congress To Probe Tragedy Of Akron

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 5.—A thorough investigation of the crash of the Akron, with no "whitewashing" and no suppression of the facts, was promised today by congressional leaders as the house naval affairs committee met to consider the question.

Rep. Vinson (D) of Georgia, chairman of the committee, declared the investigation would seek not only to determine the cause of the tragedy, but facts as well to guide congress in mapping its future naval policy.

To Await Naval Probe.

The congressional inquiry, he indicated, may be slow in getting under way and await the conclusion of the naval board of inquiry.

Stunned by the loss of two of the three navy's giant airships, congress appeared ready to drop the development of lighter-than-aircraft until science can produce a substance certain to withstand the terrific shock of sudden aerial storms.

The opinion was not unanimous. Some members including Senator Trammell (D) of Florida, chairman of the naval affairs committee, expressed the hope that the accident may be accepted as a challenge to American science and ingenuity to devise even greater fighting machines of the air.

Foremost Advocate Lost.

With the death of Rear Admiral William A. Moffatt, however, the foremost advocate of lighter-than-air passed on. Congress relied upon his advice implicitly.

Vinson favors abandonment of the lighter-than-aircraft policy, approving the pronouncement of Secretary of the Navy Swanson.

The Macon, sister ship of the Akron, will go into service, he said. The ship, now nearing completion at Akron, will soon have her trial flight.

"There will be no effort to prevent her from going into service," he said.

Vinson denied the charge of Rep. Fish (R) of New York that the naval affairs committee failed to consider the department of justice report on sabotage when it reported the Akron sound last year.

Fish demanded the naval committee compel publication of the report of department of justice agents who were sent to Akron to investigate charges of a communistic plot.

"Their report shows there was a plot to cripple the airship by sabotage," he said. "They sought to cripple the vital parts of the ship."

Paul Kassay, who was arrested on a charge of participation in the plot, was freed because an Ohio judge held the state syndicalism law invalid, Fish said.

The senate also stood ready to order an investigation of the tragedy.

ROAMING With Richards

Some News, Some Views, But Mostly Just Observations Of Interesting Things Around New Castle

One of the paying customers wants to get some information on this reforestation idea of President Roosevelt's. He wants to know if the government will put some trees in his back yard and will they supply trees and labor free? And if so, would the government mind if he took a couple of silver birches and some Japanese larch?

There is some territory in the county (we're serious now) that might be used for reforestation. The Boy Scout camp has about 15 acres of open land that would be improved by tree planting and here and there over the county can be found patches of five to 20 acres that might be available. The probabilities are that the government will confine itself to large areas of land.

Up in the timber country, or what was the timber country, around West Hickory, there are vast areas of land that were cut over years ago and now have a lot of scrub growth on them. Hillsides that lead down to rivers should be reforested. It is likely that this sort of land will get first call.

Bill Cosel tells one that sounds a bit tall but he insists it's true. A friend of his coming out of Butler the other day noticed a car right in back of him. The car in back kept blowing its horn but wouldn't pass.

When Cosel's friend slowed down the car in back slowed down. Finally the friend pulled up and stopped, determined to ask why the so and so a man would follow another car at such a close range and found that the fender of the back car was hooked under the first car, and the man hadn't wanted to come out the road at all.

Heard on the curb. Well our ice chest will hold nearly a full case.

Out in the great open spaces they have their buses built like a steam yacht, with a forward deck and an after deck. The girls glee club from Wheaton college, Wheaton, Ill., travel in such a bus and the driver of it seemed to think his job was just what the doctor ordered.

Restricted to 65 miles per day the young man has nothing much to do and all day to do it in. And on the road he has a flock of pulchritudinous young women as his companions. He even gets paid for the job.

The furry invasion is on again. Hardly a citizen on the outskirts of the city who isn't being bothered by rabbits this spring, and they always pick out the most delicate of the plants for their salad. Some night the east side is going to hear a shot, maybe a couple of shots, and if our shooting eye is up to par, a big fat rabbit is going to pass out and on.

Hope Relative Was Not Aboard Akron

Mrs. E. R. Wolf, Morton Street, Awaiting Lakehurst Message Today

Rolls of the victims of the tragic Akron disaster did not carry the name of Henry Dietzman, U. S. aircraft engineer stationed at the ship's Lakehurst, N. J. hangar, a cousin of Mrs. Emory R. Wolf, Morton street, and it was more fervently hoped that fate had spared him from a watery grave.

Dietzman, who watched the dirigible construction progress from the time the first beam was placed until it was christened in August, 1931, visited his relatives here only a short time after the ship took to the air. On many of her trial flights Mr. Dietzman was aboard, but from the list of victims it appears that he was not among the passengers when the crash came. Word is expected from him momentarily.

Clifton Flats Men Will Get Hearing

Justice Thomas To Hear Cases As Fight Result; Constable Battled

Two allegedly disorderly Clifton Flats residents were free on bond today, pending separate hearing before Justice of the Peace Ben J. Thomas. South New Castle boys, later this week. The hearings result from trouble which arose Monday afternoon.

Alec Michaels, Berger street, faced a charge of disorderly conduct filed by Russell Ficht, while Frank Dembroisky, also of Berger street, will answer to a charge of resisting an officer. Constable W. R. Waddington made the latter charge after Dembroisky interfered with his arrest of Michaels.

Waddington was slightly injured in his tussle with Dembroisky. Constable Frank C. Conner, this city, answered his call for aid.

After their arraignment before Justice Thomas, both posted bond late last night.

Michael is to be given his hearing on Saturday while Dembroisky must answer on Friday.
